The screenshot shows a Google Places page for "Robert Gordon University Aberdeen, Garthdee Campus". The main content includes the university's name, address (Garthdee House, Garthdee Road, Aberdeen AB10 7QB), a 4.8 rating from 29 reviews, and links to directions, saving the place, and viewing larger maps. Below this is a sidebar with contact information (website, phone number, edit suggestion) and a "20 Photos" section. At the bottom, there's a "Add a photo" button. Overlaid on the page is a modal dialog titled "Embed map". The dialog has tabs for "Share link" and "Embed map", with "Embed map" selected. It shows an "iframe" input field containing the URL "https://www.google.com/maps/embed?pb=!1m18!1m12!1m3!1d2166...". Below the iframe is a preview of the map showing the university's location near the River Dee. A callout box on the map highlights the university building with the text "Robert G University Aberdeen, Garthdee...". The dialog also contains a message: "This map is built for you" followed by two paragraphs explaining how saved places are handled. At the bottom of the dialog, it says "By embedding this map, you agree to the terms of service." The footer of the page includes standard Google map controls like zoom, orientation, and a scale bar (50 m).

Shit Academics Say @AcademicsSay

Acceptable reactions to speaker time warning:
1. Subtle head nod
